November Family Activates

1. Make handmade gifts for a charity to sell.:

Especially during the holidays, your kids will enjoy making sweet DIY gifts to donate to charity. They'll be able to see that something they make will bring joy to others.

2. Host a give-back play date:

Organize a play date with your parent friends, and have each guest bring something you can donate to a local food pantry or non-profit. Your kids can see the pile of items, and help you drop it off.

3. Gather the old toys and donate them to an organization:

Are your kids already making their holiday wish list and checking it twice? This season why not teach your littles ones about the power of giving and receiving. You can try a "one-for-one" holiday wish list idea; for every item on your kid's wish list, have them donate one of their items. Then, take those items to the places you may not think of for donations. For example, hospitals and pediatrician's waiting rooms may be glad to receive a box of gently used toys and books (check with them first just to make sure). Daycare centers and churches/synagogues may use them, as well as police and fire departments for helping to calm a distraught kiddo.

4. Host a bake sale to end child hunger:

No Kid Hungry is committed to making sure kids never go hungry. One of the ways they meet this goal is through the Bake Sale to End Child Hunger. This national fundraising initiative is simple: you hold a bake sale in your community, and the proceeds are donated back to the organization. Simply fill out the Start a Bake Sale online form and enter the dates, locations and times.

Our kids interacting with learning content and technology which creates a richer learning experience!
